

MEXICO'S ENERGY SECTOR: COMMERCIAL & POLICY OUTLOOK

Mexico Energy Intelligence®

1995

September

WED, SEP 27, 95 False Expectations Regarding Border Development

File 092795 This seminar paper was presented in Tijuana at the Border Research Center (COLEF) at a seminar at which former President Miguel de la Madrid was also a panelist. The paper is a wide-ranging critique of the political, cultural and economic constraints on the development of the U.S.-Mexico border region; the paper examines the cultural profile of the U.S. side of the border the principal economic drivers of which are the military and aerospace industries.

Pages 17

Charts 11

SAT, SEP 9, 95 LPG v. natural gas culture in Mexico City

File 51 Report of conversations with Jorge Rebolledo [senior], president of DIGANAMEX, the natural gas distributorship in Mexico City, about the absence of a natural gas culture in Mexico. The social cost of LPG and the current market leaders in the residential sector are also considered.

Pages 1

Charts 0

August

WED, AUG 2, 95 Pemex Petrochemical spin-offs

File 44 Press briefing of Pemex CEO in relation to divestiture of Pemex petrochemical plants. Pemex is to remain a share-holder in the new privatized companies for a period of several years; also the companies will be required to continue with existing union contracts.

Pages 1

Charts 4

File 45 Oil analyst David Shields takes strong objection to the way in which the divestment process in relation to Pemex's petrochemical plants is taking place. He argues that the policy is a matter of expediency, without any strategic plan for how the petrochemical industry is to grow in the future. he advocates postponement of the sale..

Pages 1

Charts 1

March

SAT, MAR 25, 95 Applying a Virtual Economy Model in Mexico's Energy Sector

File 032595 With the passage of NAFTA, it was expected that the Mexican economy, including the energy sector, would move from a Command Economy toward that either of a Market Economy or a Mixed Economy. In fact, it did neither. In the energy sector, there emerged a Virtual Market Economy in which international benchmarks were used in place of actual competition. The article was published in Energy Studies Review, Vol. VI (3), 1994: 254-26. Available online: <http://digitalcommons.mcmaster.ca/esr/vol6/iss3/1>.

Pages 11

Charts 5

February

MON, FEB 20, 95 The Deconstruction of Mexican Politics

File 022095 This essay by George Baker argues that the political terminology, institutions and processes of Mexican politics are understood only by a small fraction of the Mexican adult population for whom the articulation of public policy is as dimly viewed as it is in the United States and Canada. Unpublished. Feb. 20, 1995 (5 pages).

Pages 5

Charts 0

MEXICO'S ENERGY SECTOR: COMMERCIAL & POLICY OUTLOOK

Mexico Energy Intelligence®

1995

September

WED, SEP 27, 95 False Expectations Regarding Border Development

File 092795
Pages 17
Charts 11

This seminar paper was presented in Tijuana at the Border Research Center (COLEF) at a seminar at which former President Miguel de la Madrid was also a panelist. The paper is a wide-ranging critique of the political, cultural and economic constraints on the development of the U.S.-Mexico border region; the paper examines the cultural profile of the U.S. side of the border the principal economic drivers of which are the military and aerospace industries.

SAT, SEP 9, 95 LPG v. natural gas culture in Mexico City

File 51
Pages 1
Charts 0

Report of conversations with Jorge Rebolledo [senior], president of DIGANAMEX, the natural gas distributorship in Mexico City, about the absence of a natural gas culture in Mexico. The social cost of LPG and the current market leaders in the residential sector are also considered.

August

WED, AUG 2, 95 Pemex Petrochemical spin-offs

File 44
Pages 1
Charts 4

Press briefing of Pemex CEO in relation to divestiture of Pemex petrochemical plants. Pemex is to remain a share-holder in the new privatized companies for a period of several years; also the companies will be required to continue with existing union contracts.

File 45
Pages 1
Charts 1

Oil analyst David Shields takes strong objection to the way in which the divestment process in relation to Pemex's petrochemical plants is taking place. He argues that the policy is a matter of expediency, without any strategic plan for how the petrochemical industry is to grow in the future. he advocates postponement of the sale..

March

SAT, MAR 25, 95 Applying a Virtual Economy Model in Mexico's Energy Sector

File 032595
Pages 11
Charts 5

With the passage of NAFTA, it was expected that the Mexican economy, including the energy sector, would move from a Command Economy toward that either of a Market Economy or a Mixed Economy. In fact, it did neither. In the energy sector, there emerged a Virtual Market Economy in which international benchmarks were used in place of actual competition. The article was published in Energy Studies Review, Vol. VI (3), 1994: 254-26. Available online: <http://digitalcommons.mcmaster.ca/esr/vol6/iss3/1>.

February

MON, FEB 20, 95 The Deconstruction of Mexican Politics

File 022095
Pages 5
Charts 0

This essay by George Baker argues that the political terminology, institutions and processes of Mexican politics are understood only by a small fraction of the Mexican adult population for whom the articulation of public policy is as dimly viewed as it is in the United States and Canada. Unpublished. Feb. 20, 1995 (5 pages).

MEXICO'S ENERGY SECTOR: COMMERCIAL & POLICY OUTLOOK

Mexico Energy Intelligence®

1995

September

WED, SEP 27, 95 False Expectations Regarding Border Development

File 092795 This seminar paper was presented in Tijuana at the Border Research Center (COLEF) at a seminar at which former President Miguel de la Madrid was also a panelist. The paper is a wide-ranging critique of the political, cultural and economic constraints on the development of the U.S.-Mexico border region; the paper examines the cultural profile of the U.S. side of the border the principal economic drivers of which are the military and aerospace industries.

Pages 17

Charts 11

SAT, SEP 9, 95 LPG v. natural gas culture in Mexico City

File 51 Report of conversations with Jorge Rebolledo [senior], president of DIGANAMEX, the natural gas distributorship in Mexico City, about the absence of a natural gas culture in Mexico. The social cost of LPG and the current market leaders in the residential sector are also considered.

Pages 1

Charts 0

August

WED, AUG 2, 95 Pemex Petrochemical spin-offs

File 44 Press briefing of Pemex CEO in relation to divestiture of Pemex petrochemical plants. Pemex is to remain a share-holder in the new privatized companies for a period of several years; also the companies will be required to continue with existing union contracts.

Pages 1

Charts 4

File 45 Oil analyst David Shields takes strong objection to the way in which the divestment process in relation to Pemex's petrochemical plants is taking place. He argues that the policy is a matter of expediency, without any strategic plan for how the petrochemical industry is to grow in the future. he advocates postponement of the sale..

Pages 1

Charts 1

March

SAT, MAR 25, 95 Applying a Virtual Economy Model in Mexico's Energy Sector

File 032595 With the passage of NAFTA, it was expected that the Mexican economy, including the energy sector, would move from a Command Economy toward that either of a Market Economy or a Mixed Economy. In fact, it did neither. In the energy sector, there emerged a Virtual Market Economy in which international benchmarks were used in place of actual competition. The article was published in Energy Studies Review, Vol. VI (3), 1994: 254-26. Available online: <http://digitalcommons.mcmaster.ca/esr/vol6/iss3/1>.

Pages 11

Charts 5

February

MON, FEB 20, 95 The Deconstruction of Mexican Politics

File 022095 This essay by George Baker argues that the political terminology, institutions and processes of Mexican politics are understood only by a small fraction of the Mexican adult population for whom the articulation of public policy is as dimly viewed as it is in the United States and Canada. Unpublished. Feb. 20, 1995 (5 pages).

Pages 5

Charts 0